

CALL FOR PAPERS

Etnologické rozpravy / Ethnological Debates 2021 / 2

Moral narratives in history

Stories about historical events belong to the most important aspects of any culture. They are related to the identity of the members of a given society and connected with moral norms. Narratives about the past are a part of cultural education - they provide a model for heroic deeds, but also images of enemies. They can therefore reveal not only the nuances of moral rules, but also the role of history in the socio-political context. The prepared second issue of the journal Etnologické rozpravy / Ethnological Debates in the year 2021 will give space to contributions on relevant topics. The editors invite analytic, theoretical or synthetic articles, research reports, essays and discussions, focused especially (not, however, exclusively) on the following issues linked to the pandemic:

- The use of history in interpretations of the present
- Moral emotions in representations of historical events
- Images of heroes and enemies in history
- The role of history in cultural education
- Moral assessment of religious and ethnic groups in stories about the past
- Mass media representations of history
- Conspiracy theories
- Representations of historical events in a political context
- Commemoration rituals

Please send your abstract as an e-mail attachment to the editors, at etnologicke.rozpravy@gmail.com until 15. 4. 2021.

Final date for papers: 30. 6. 2021.
